A Miner's Streak of Luck.

Herman School, of Silver City, Neveds, owns and works a little mine to the southward of and on a line with the Farman shaft, which is not a bad piece of property for one man to have. He has now been working his mine some three years, and it has never yet asked him to work for nothing. So far as he has suck on his vein the quartz is geld beating. In some points il would be speaking more to the point to say that the gold is quarz bearing, as a small quantity of quartz is found sticking to a large amount of gold.

Some years rgo Herman School showed the writer a seccimen of his quartz bearing gold, soying. There is plenty more of the same kind where this came from. I have been watching the place for two vests, and if there shall be no more work done there is another year I shall own the ground." He then explained that he lound the gold in the side of an old abandened tunnel, and had carefully plastered up and concealed the place where the gold made its ap-pearance. In after conversation he always said, "I shall have all the mency I want one of those days—it will not be leng now before I shall come into my preperty."

Finally we missed Mr. School from the streets of Virginia City, where he was generally to be found in those piaces in which stock dealers 'do most congregate."

We did not see him for a long time, and he then said he was living in Silver City. Still remembering the gold he had shown us, we asked if he had at last 'come into his property," and how it was "paguing cut." Mr. School was very reticoot, though he was good enough to say that he thought from the

A day or two since we met Mr. School, and the conversation turned upon the old times, when he was yet reckened among the million "When I first went to work down there," said he, the misers in the neighborhood did not know what to make of me. Every night THUTT'S PILLS the south side of the Foor's House isne, running thence on said line of said lane N. Sto, E. 44 when I quit work I carried home on my back a poles; thence S. 120, W. 34 poles S links to the N. E. side of the Leesburg lumpike; thence N. ground in which I was at work good for sothing the N. E. side of the Leesburg lumpike; thence N. they concluded I must have mining on the brain. No doubt some of them thought I was going crazy. They finally regularly made fun S poles 13 links; thence still with said turnpike of me when they saw me going home of evenings with my load of rock on my shoulders. They'd sing out: 'Bullo, Herman! Got another sack of wire silver? Let us see your samples-must have got something mighty rich.' etc.

"I cou'd siford to let them laugh," said Harman, 'for I was not earrying home trash. this way I packed home on my back two tons and a half of quartz I then got it crushed, and the result was $35,000 in gold. Had I been filling my barley sack each evening with silver dollars I could not have carried home as much money in the same time as I did when I was loaded with the rich specimers from my mice. All this time the boys thought I was crazy-hs, hs, ha! It just suited me to have them think so my packing home the very richest of my oresuch as I did not care to leave 19ing about-and I did not care to have anyone inspect my dump pile too closely. It was a good joke, but the raugh was on my side. There goes Herman with another sack of wire silver--us, half and so it went in these days '

'This will be for Milton,"-A San Francisco publisher sent a spiek span new eo; y of Milian to a Bodie editor the other day. The great man, whose labor prior to taking charge of an icfluential mountain journal had been principally confined to writing policy items for the metropelitan papers during the winter and taking exercise to the harvest fields to summer, heaved a weary sigh as the office toy handed bias the volume, and remarked titterly, "More new books to review, I suppose," took out his tobaces kuife and proceeded leisurely to out the virgin pages. "Milion-Milion," he said, We received yesterday a copy of John Milton's poen's from the enterprising publishing bouse of X. X. San Francisco. The book opens with a long yarn, 'Paradise Lest.' very improperly emmerces with a description of hell, a topic that is never mentioned in the polite circles of this camp, and gives a most theroughly ab urd pen portrais of the devil. This person he pictures as many rids in length, while the best authorities on the subject have ikened him to a goat. He gies on then to tell of a fight with a batch of ange's, wherein the devil, as a matter of course, gets the worst of it, being from the very start the under deg in the fight. This is quite enough for us. John Milica would do batter to return to his legitimate newspaper sphere. He may be able to describe a mas juorade bail or a street roe, tut in our epinion he is a very poor poet."
"This will do for Milton," said the editor as be rassed the copy in to the foreman and turned with relief to the perusal of a reported strike in South Bulwer .- Andrews' American Queen.
